ABOUT THE COMPANY:

Brian Fleming has worked in the biotech medical field for nearly a quarter of a century. Today, he's president of Omega Medical Imaging, a world-class manufacturer of fluoroscopic imaging solutions. The company was originally formed in 1990, and for years, Fleming kept an eye on it as a company with great potential to grow.

That potential became enough for him to acquire it with his partners in Venture Management Group in 2010, where they have now grown sales by 54 percent. The company builds a machine that merges 100-year-old X-ray technology with the latest software and computer imaging technology. Competing against industry giants such as GE, Siemens and Toshiba, Omega has presents a crucial advantage: offering customers customized equipment that is dependable, more affordable and easier to operate.

In 2012, Fleming joined CEO Nexus, a program offered in conjunction with the Edward Lowe Foundation and designed specifically for leaders of second-stage companies, to get the opportunity to learn from and share with other leaders of companies in his region. He commented, "The priceless wisdom and connections gained from successful entrepreneurial leaders in my CEO Roundtable and the contacts and resources facilitated by Steve Quello, Fran Korsec, GrowFL and the Center for Advanced Entrepreneurship has resulted in Omega Medical Imaging landing deals, developing strategic collaborations, and expanding our network of key knowledge leaders."

ABOUT THE AWARD:

CEO Nexus, in collaboration with the Center for Advanced Entrepreneurship at Rollins College, Florida High Tech Corridor Council and GrowFL, brings together leaders of established growth-oriented businesses in a confidential setting to meet and learn from CEO peers who have grown their companies into more advanced stages of business development. The CEO Nexus Cup is a traveling trophy and member-recognition award, recognizing those companies that have achieved growth and entrepreneurial success, in part due to their collaboration with CEO Nexus.
